Time for a natter

“Autumn is the season to find contentment at home by paying attention to what we already have.”

September is a time of transition, a time of new beginnings, a time of change.

We have to dig out an extra layer or two for the chillier mornings and there are fewer opportunities for last minute gatherings in the nice weather as we start to retreat inside our homes.

Whilst some of us will be starting new chapters; with relatives or friends starting a new year at school or a new life at university, others may feel left behind, unsettled or lonely.

Take a leaf out of autumn’s book and use this moment of transition as an opportunity to reach out, connect with others, and try something new. Not only will you feel happier, you’ll be spreading a little joy everywhere you go.

- Smile (it’s infectious - in a good way!)
- Say hello, and make time for a chat
- Look out for chances to meet people and nurture new friendships

Let’s all start the new season feeling refreshed. Happy chatting!
